The Moose Jaw Times.

FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 12, 1892.

SALUTATORY.

In assuming control of a public journal, deference to public opinion requires some indication of the principles which shall guide us and the course we shall pursue.

The functions of a free press in a free country are so well understood as to render general explanation superfluous. The inevitable expansion of a young nation's life forbids a rigid adherence to fixed rule in matter of detail.

We do not propose to set the world on fire to any extent. It is too valuable at the present juncture and contains so much inflammable material as would render the process hazardous. Nor do we mean to float in the nebulous haze of an undefined policy, watching the drift of popular sentiment for indications by which to steer.

THE TIMES supports the principles of the Conservative Party. It believes that the policy of that party is the outcome of a profound knowledge of the laws that govern a nation's welfare,—that it shows a deep insight into the needs of the people of Canada and a hearty interest in all that tends to that people's well-being.

In our Legislative Assembly the TIMES holds that party politics have no place. We refuse to believe that a country such as ours should be made a tennis ball for the amusement of rival cliques. Upon all grave questions,—the duties and obligations of the governing and the governed, the development and increase of the resources of the Territories, the protection of the rights and liberties of the people,—the Assembly has generally been a unit. And in all or any of the actions of that body, or of any of its members, on all questions affecting the interests of our "goodly heritage," we are prepared to recognize statesmanship by whomsoever displayed, and to demand honest and capable administration from whomsoever may be the custodians of power.

We have faith in the Imperial race which has led the world in Freedom's march, conserving principles that enshrine the wisdom of centuries in the building up of a nation which has its centre in the largest city on earth, and its frontiers wherever the foot of man has trod.

We have faith in the Dominion at large,—in these incipient provinces, for they have great resources and capabilities,—in the Moose Jaw district where lie the requisites for the building up of a happy and prosperous community,—in the town of Moose Jaw, which has arrived at that stage in its history when it requires no prophetic vision to predict for it a future exceeding bright.

We enter upon our duties with a lively sense of what we owe to an extensive and enlightened community. In furnishing intellectual fare to the numerous readers of the TIMES our best powers of mind and body will be cheerfully and constantly devoted.

We have also an abiding sense of the duty we owe to ourselves. We will best serve our readers by reverencing our conscience as our King, by an unswerving allegiance to the Right, and an unflinching war upon Wrong.

THE VOICE OF THE PEOPLE.

The voice of the people of Canada was unmistakably indicated in the recent contest in Lennox and Prince Edward, and in those of yesterday.

In the County of Lennox, Wilson was elected over his opponent by a majority of 31, as compared with an Opposition majority of 59 in the election of March, 1891.

In Prince Edward, Miller materially increased the Government majority, defeating twice within a year one of the strongest men in the Opposition ranks.

In yesterday's contests every constituency, but one, returned Conservatives. In Halifax, Kenny and Stairs were elected by 900 majority. In East Middlesex, the Conservative majority was increased by 150 over last election. In North and South Victoria, and East Bruce, the Conservative Candidates were returned by increased majorities.

These events are powerful manifestations of popular approval and confidence, and prove that, when Parliament meets again, the Conservative party will be more strongly cemented, and its majority considerably increased.

MEDALS AND SCRIP.

Before the Legislative Assembly closed its first Session, a resolution was passed urging the claims of the N. W. Mounted Police for Medals and Scrip, for their services during the Rebellion of 1885.

When the Medals and Scrip were disbursed after the Rebellion, the claims of the Police were not considered, the plea being that the Police were not on an equal footing with the militia, and that, consequently, they could not share in the rewards.

When the rebellion broke out instructions were issued to the Commissioner to hold the force in readiness to come under the orders of General Middleton. This, in itself, made the Mounted Police, for the time being, part of the Militia of Canada; and the members of the force were entitled to any reward granted the Militia, even though they had never been taken from barracks. But such was not the case. The Police bore a heavy share of the privations and dangers. Being familiar with the country, and accustomed to the ways of the Indians and Half breeds, they were especially fitted for the trying duties they were called upon to perform. In the suppression of the Rebellion the Mounted Police rendered services of no mean order, and it is manifestly unfair that they should not receive the acknowledgement that is so justly their due.

RETIRING FROM PUBLIC LIFE.

On the first of February, Mr. Chas. H. Mackintosh, who has been editor of the Ottawa Citizen for the past seventeen years, severed his connection with that paper. This step is but preliminary to his entire withdrawal from active political life.

Mr. Mackintosh is a well-informed politician, an accurate and convincing writer, and an able speaker. The services he has rendered the party are of no light nature. He has been unselfishly patriotic in the service of his country. His loss will be keenly felt by the Conservative Party in particular, and by the Press of Canada in general.

The new proprietor of the TIMES desires to thank the Brandon Times and the Regina Leader for the kind expressions with which they announce his assumption of the management of this paper.

FARMERS' INSTITUTE.

A meeting of the Moose Jaw Board of Directors of the Farmer's Institute was held in the Ottawa Hotel on Saturday Feb. 6th. Present, Messrs. Rathwell, Hopkins, Annable, Paisley, Battell and McIntosh, Mr. Rathwell presided. The Chairman explained that the object of the meeting was to arrange for a Farmers' supper or social. The Secretary-Treasurer, Mr. McIntosh reported that he had communicated with Mr. McKay of the Experimental Farm at Indian Head. That gentleman had promised to be present and deliver a lecture on his experiments. The Secy. also reported that N. F. Davin, M. P. and J. H. Ross, M. L. A. had promised to be present. Messrs. Hopkins, Annable, Paisley, Rathwell, and McIntosh were appointed a committee to confer upon the above matter with a similar committee from the Moose Jaw Agricultural Society.

AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY.

Eighth Annual Meeting—Election of Officers—Appointment of Board of Directors.

The eighth annual meeting of the Moose Jaw Agricultural Society was held in Russell hall on Jan. 30th.

The annual reports of the Secretary, Treasurer, and retiring Board of Directors were received and adopted.

A letter was read from R. L. Alexander, Dominion Gov. Immigration Agent with reference to the request of the Government for a Moose Jaw exhibit at the World's Fair, the matter was referred to the future Board of Directors.

The following officers were then elected:—

McIntosh; Board of Directors, H. McDougall, H. Battell, H. Smith, Ed. Love, H. Hurlbert, H. Gilmour, Jr., Wm. Walsh, O. B. Fysh, M. Johnson, H. Dorrel, D. Malloch, Thos. Wint, and S. K. Rathwell.

A Work of Patience.

A correspondent of London Notes and Queries, in 1834, made the following contribution:

The following account of this truly wonderful specimen of human patience and skill is from a rough copy that I took some years ago. I regret that I cannot give any reference, as I made no note of my authority, which has now escaped my recollection. But this is of little consequence, as the book is well known to bibliographers. Perhaps the most singular bibliographic curiosity is that which belonged to the family of the Prince de Ligne, and is now in France. It is entitled "Liber Passions Domini nostri Jesu Christi, cum Characteribus nulla materia compositis." This book is neither written nor printed. The whole letters of the text are cut out of rect folio upon the finest vellum; and being interleaved with blue paper, is read as easily as the best print. The labor and patience bestowed upon its completion must have been excessive, especially when the precision and minuteness of the letters are considered. The general execution in every respect is indeed admirable; and the vellum is of the most delicate and costly kind. Rodolphus II of Germany offered for it, in 1610, 11,000 ducats, which was probably equal to 50,000 at this day. The most remarkable circumstance connected with this literary treasure is that it bears the royal arms of England; but it cannot be traced to have ever been in this country.

The Old Fleet Prison.

The Fleet was a famous prison in London, named from the creek or stream of the Fleet, upon the bank of which it was erected. After an existence of nearly eight centuries it was abolished, and removed about 1845. It has been tenanted by many distinguished victims. Pope calls it the "Haunt of the Muse," from the number of poets who have been confined here. The prisoners were subjected in many cases to most cruel and outrageous treatment. The horrors of the Fleet were brought to public notice in 1726 by the trial of the warden for murder. The prison and its immediate neighborhood were notorious for the so-called "Fleet marriages," which were performed by clergymen imprisoned for debt. Great numbers of these marriages were solemnized, as the clergyman could, of course, defy the fine for performing clandestine and irregular marriages. The practice was put a stop to by act of parliament in 1754. The day before this act went into operation 217 marriages were recorded in one register alone.

"White in a Single Night."

Chemists have discovered that the hair contains an oil, a mucous substance, iron and carbonates of iron, phosphate and oxide of manganese, besides a large proportion of sulphur. White hair contains also phosphate of magnesia, and its oil is nearly colorless. When hair becomes suddenly white, from fright or other causes, it is probably owing to the sulphur absorbing the oil, as in the operation of whitening linen cloths.

A union fell off a Wheeling, W. Va., truck and split lengthwise. A dirty faced boy immediately sprang from nowhere, lit on one of the hemispheres, gave his face a header into its liquid depths, and, presently emerging, spluttered the ecstatic remark: "It's a sloppy day when I don't get aboard."

A novel service was held recently by the congregation Shearith-Tefillah, of Orange, N. Y. It was the consecration of a scroll of the book of the law presented to the congregation. The scroll is written entirely by hand, in Hebrew, upon parchment, and is eighteen inches in width and over two hundred feet in length. It contains the entire Pentateuch.

THE MARRIAGE QUESTION.

Extracts from the doings of the "Homestead Club."

Scene: The Homestead. Time 6 p. m. Oct. 6th. Year: Nobody's business. Persons: John, from Huron, his two sons, Dad, who had left a salaried position to "get land"; Hank, trained at the Guelph school. Both ready for work or play, or grub, when grub was called. Neighbors were there,--Lochy, Mac, Yorky, and Alf. They had come for mail, the homestead being also the post office.

Suddenly supper was called, and a sweet calm fell on the crowd, for Mrs. John set a bright inviting table, and John was never loth to have a neighbor's company at meals. They all sat to supper, "ready to be pleased and please," with no lack of pleasant things to eat or to talk about. When each had got down to his work and told "his latest," John spoke.

"Friends, you waste too much time in idle talk."

Dad--(ever ready to resist wrong)--Oh you talk more than any three.

John--Idle talk is talk without a purpose. I have something to propose. You know you are all welcome here on mail nights. I want you once a week to discuss for an hour matters touching our homes, families, lives, and the future of this country.

Yorky--Well said! If you furnish supper, books, papers and all the rest of it, and let Dad be secretary, we'll form a society right off.

John--If the boys are willing and you folk are agreed we'll call it a bargain. But, mind you, we'll have no nonsense, no talk merely for talk's sake. The sessions of this club must be wholly given to crisp thought uttered in "sound speech that cannot be condemned," with such reasonable spice of fun as is relished by the wisest men.

Hank--We are all wise then.

John--You have a clerk. Appoint a chairman and you'll then be organized.

Mac--The chairman is chosen, (all look at John).

John--I suppose so, and you all expect me to sit silent while you do the talking.

Dad--As if that were possible!

John--Well let's work on Parliamentary rules, yet not to waste time over forms. When one has delivered himself on a given point, another may retort or expose flaws in statements or inference, but the subject must be kept in view and only one may speak at a time. What is to be discussed? Among the questions touching our welfare are: "Settlement of vacant lands," "Settlement of our young men by marriage," "How to educate the people."

Dad--Oh stop! The first subject involves several more and will take half the winter to consider.

Yorky--You needn't fight why of the marriage question, Dad, you're only twenty-two and you have a "girl."

Mac--When shall we open the discussion? I want to know how we can get more neighbors.

John--We must choose a subject. Shall it be "vacant lands" or "silent shanties"? In my opinion the latter is the more urgent of the two. This country but prevent the extinction of the race as represented here. Involved in the Marriage question are others such as improved houses, domestic help, facilities for relieving married women of the drudgery many of them now undergo.

Yorky--Do you want the men to do all the work?

John--The average married woman does as much work as two ordinary men! What say you? Shall we take this up first? Mac and Yorky are family men, Alf, Dad, and Hank are old enough to have "someone to love." If we had three ladies of various age and condition we could as a club view the matter from every stand point.

Dad--But what is the question?

John--(musing) "What are the motives or causes which lead thousands of the best men of the foremost race of time to evade the most imperative duty enjoined upon Man?"

Lochy--Is marriage the most--what do you call it?

John--(stern but calm) The first command, Sir!

Lochy--I'm not so sure of that.

John--Of course! you're not sure of anything in particular! The dust I saw on your Bible yesterday looked very like the color of that yellow clay the badgers had thrown out in the field you harrowed last April. The field has not been disturbed since, nor the Bible either, I fear. But the morals on your window sill look as if they had been used a dozen times. You want a wife, Lochy! But what about the question?

Dad--I've stated it more generally: "Why is marriage so much neglected in the Northwest?"

Hank--We must agree on some principles, else we shall "find no end in wandering mazes lost." Let it be assumed "that marriage is a duty incumbent upon every person of mature age, sound health and mind, and having the means of gaining a comfortable subsistence."

Mac and Yorky (together)--Hear! hear! John--A majority favor the suggestion. We practically agree that single life in this country is not good, therefore it is evil, as it cannot be a matter of indifference. Let us enquire why the evil exists. Yorky will speak first, then Lochy, Mac, Dad, Alf, and Hank, in the order named.

Yorky--I think, gentlemen, that the boys have too much land and they're too keen to get rich. They live in a hurry and yet they don't get half as much work done than they would if each had a wife to look after him. They don't seem to take the time to think either of their own future or the future of the country. That's all I've to say.

Lochy--What's a fellow to do? There's only a few girls and they're not all fit for farmer's wives, and if there is one a fellow would like to get she's apt to be too proud to look at a working man. Besides I want to get a house fit to offer a wife before offer myself to a young woman.

Mac--Oh, Lochy! You're 38 past, so you say. You have carried your washing back and forth two miles, you've cooked and washed dishes and sewed on buttons for ten years. Is your home any better fit for a wife than it was in '81?

Lochy--Humph! I like that!

Mac--I believe most single men know that their lives are out of gear, but they come here with high hopes, and they hate to begin now on the quiet scale that suited young people in old Canada. But they must get rid of their lofty notions; take the best wives they can get; live as well as they can; do as their parents did; or else grow old and die without son or daughter to comfort their age or bear their name.

Dad--Do you suppose I am going to take my wife into a log shanty to live, and see the light fade out of her eyes, and the hope out of her heart, while year in and year out she milks cows and churns and washes and mends and cooks and tends children? I'm not built that way. When I marry I'll have as many labor saving conveniences in doors as out. I'll provide as much help for my wife, proportionate to the work, as I have for myself. I'll give as much care to the home where I intend to spend the best part of my life in this world, as I give to the fields where I spend my hours of labor.

This country has resources enough to enable us all to live in comfort, if we will but value ourselves as highly as we value our cattle or our crops, or our land. I don't prescribe rules for others, but I guess I can manage three hundred and twenty acres of land, support a family in moderate comfort, keep out of debt, and get a little ahead year by year, without making a drudge of myself or of the wife I hope to have within a reasonable time. That's my say.

John--The hour is up and the discussion closes. Alf and Hank will have to prepare something juicy for next session. My dear (to Mrs. John) could you coax Miss Yellowleaf and Mary Maybald to join and help us in this discussion? Yes, all right. The meeting stands adjourned to this night week.

COMMUNICATIONS.

THE TIMES does not hold itself responsible for the opinions expressed by correspondents. No communication will be inserted unless the name of the writer accompanies it, not necessarily for publication, but as a guarantee of good faith.

VITAL STATISTICS.

To the Editor of THE TIMES.
Dear Sir,--I wish to draw the attention of those concerned to the requirements of the Revised Ordinance with reference to the registration of "Vital Statistics."

Ordinance No. 6, of 1888, clause 24, reads: "If any person required by this ordinance to report Births, Marriages, Deaths and Burials, refuses or wilfully neglects to do so within the time required, such person shall for each and every offence forfeit and pay a sum not less than one nor more than fifty dollars in the discretion of the presiding justice before whom the case is heard, and it shall be the duty of the Division Registrar to prosecute all such persons so neglecting or refusing to make the required report."

The time within which a birth should be registered is 30 days, a marriage 14 days, a death should be registered within 14 days after death. Blank forms can be had from the undersigned, or from the postmaster, which if more convenient when properly filled in can be mailed to my address free of postage if envelope is left open and marked "Registration returns." Parties required to make the above reports should do so and avoid the risk of prosecution.

Yours, etc.,
H. McDONALD,
Division Registrar.

TOWN AFFAIRS.

To the Editor of THE TIMES.
Sir--When the present Council were elected in the first week of January, the ratemakers of the town imagined that a new order of things would be inaugurated, and that the affairs of the town would receive proper attention. They now find that they are again to be disappointed. The chemical fire engine is still standing in the old place, and is frozen up so as to be entirely useless in case of fire. The chemicals for it are lying in the freight house. No Town Inspector has been appointed, and cattle are running at large on our principal streets. The citizens are allowed to dump their ashes in heaps, on the streets, or in the back yards, as they choose, without molestation. The fire limit by-law is a dead letter, and shacks are being erected in the burned portion of the town. No steps have as yet been taken to replace the burned sidewalk on the west side of Main street, and business along that side of the street is being injuriously affected through the neglect of our town councilors. To the town fathers I say, Come, gentlemen! Do something towards remedying the things mentioned above, and you will win the esteem and confidence of the ratemakers of Moose Jaw.

Yours truly,
A. RATERATER.

Experiences of a Noble Viscount and his Country Woods

The young Lord Kilfoyle made up his mind to see as much of the world as he could, and as early as possible. With this object in view he engaged a tutor to look after him. An Oxford graduate, the Rev. William White. The tutor was not much in advance of the Viscount in years, and certainly not in worldly experience, but, according to custom, he was the proper person to accompany the young lord in his travels. So, with bright anticipations as to what they should see and hear in America, they sailed for Philanthropic persons suggested to the noble lordling that a guide—one experienced in woodcraft—should be engaged to prevent a calamity, but my lord of Kilfoyle wanted all the honor to himself of killing the moose. If a practical hunter accompanied him, he explained, it would take the appetite away from the adventure. He wanted to slay a moose, perhaps many of them, but he wanted to do it alone and unaided.

The moose, as those well acquainted with

It was a bright and crisp morning in the month of February that the Viscount and his secretary Mr. de la Roche, who had been in the country for the winter, were in the forest of Fontainebleau. The Viscount, Jean Baptiste de la Roche, who drove them in his "jaquet" (coach), gave the young men some useful advice. He told them to stick together and not be very careful to make marks as they went along the paths. He explained to them that it was the very easiest thing in the world to go astray in following up these paths; they were so numerous and crossed each other in so many different directions, that unless a hunter was very careful to keep a sharp eye on the ground, he would be liable to lose the power of wandering for days before being able to regain the point they started from. He said that practical hunters adopted a common "yard" was to "blaze" (chip) trees here and there as they went along, by using a long pole to reach the trunk of the tree on the side of the tree in the direction in which they went, so as to avoid confusion. As a last word he told them that

As they went forward over one of the paths the tutor would occasionally bend down a twig as a means of future guidance. But after an hour's tramping, with no gain in sight or hearing, a halt was called, and the Viscount and his companion agreed to divide, but to pursue parallel paths. Most paths, however, are very deceiving. They intersect each other so frequently that even the closest observer is liable to be led astray. The Viscount and Mr. White walked along on different paths, each satisfied with

When the bullet struck, the moose sprang into the air with a roar of pain, and the gazers around to see whence came the noise he saw the Englishman. The pain he wound threw the beast into a fury, and with a howl of rage, he came bounding through the snow. The Viscount was startled by surprise by this action of the moose. He was taught to suppose that when a deer was shot at he either should drop or else run away. This animal, nevertheless, was coming at his enemy with a roar and hoary eyes, the foam flying from retreating nostrils.

As the moose bore down upon the Englishman the latter sprang behind a tree and escaped a blow from the head of the animal that had power enough in it to kill the whole house of Lords. As the Englishman sprang from the descending horns and dodged the tree, the latter, in his confusion, unfortunately dropped his rifle, which at once sank out of sight in the deep snow.

Then began a series of dodging movements which developed an amount of agility that surprised the young fellow himself. The wounded moose would charge at his enemy in a way that meant instant death, and the latter would avoid the beast by dodging behind the immense pine which served him for a refuge. The young Englishman could see that the moose was determined to kill him to death beneath its sharp hoofs, and he knew that the only escape left him was

With that hope in his heart he felt equal to the emergency. The moose, after each successive charge would retire ten or fifteen feet, pause for a second or so, and then with a bellow that made the branches quiver, bear down upon his foe. Twenty minutes of this perilous dodging began to tell upon the Viscount. He felt himself growing exhausted, while the mad moose seemed to be growing madder. What was to be done? The tutor had evidently wandered too far away to hear the report, or else something had befallen him. If he could only burrow in the snow out of sight, but that was im-

The sudden turn of affairs bewildered the animal. He shook his head in fury and rage, but the coat still clung to the prongs, partly because the animal was so small, and partly because he endeavored to shake the garment off, but without avail. Each shake entangled it the more. Finding that his efforts were useless he dashed away on the path, but in a direction opposite to that taken by the rescuer. Just as he was about to reach the end of the path and down the other hardly knowing whether he was coming in the right direction or not, he noticed in sight, and seeing the moose flying down the path with the Viscount's coat on his head, he turned back, and, of course was promptly stricken with horror at the awful fate of the house of Kingley borne away by a fierce animal to be devoured. What a story the Rev. Mr. White would have to tell!

It is true that Kingley had actually been carried away, and all by a terrible animal in the Canadian wood.

Big Canals of the World.

The canal is an ancient institution. It co-exists with the remotest periods of human history, since the primitive man discovered the value of an artificial waterway across a peninsula, or from one remote stream to the navigable waters of another. Historians allude to these artificial channels as existing in Egypt and elsewhere in the far away centuries preceding the Christian era.

In the year 1289 the Chinese completed a length of navigation being eighty-eight geographical miles. This transpolar waterway is navigable by steamers 400 feet in length and 50 feet beam, the cost of the gigantic enterprise, including its harbors, being about $100,000,000.

In the western hemisphere both in the United States and Canada, the inland canals has long been an economic necessity, and in the Erie and the Welland, etc., we have examples of their service.

There is a deficit in the Russian treasury of 24,000,000 roubles.

Build up a safe foundation,
 Live within your means and station,—
 Do the right and dare creation!
 Live it down! live it down!
 If false friends betray, deceive you,
 Live it down! live it down!
 Better now that you shall sever
 Friendships that are false and ever,
 Trusting to your own endeavor,
 Live it down! live it down!
 Should misfortune e'er o'ertake you,
 Live it down! live it down!
 Own up your faults and transgression,
 Never be above confession,
 Cover not beneath oppression,
 Live it down! live it down!
 Heed not sneaking coward's railing,
 Live it down! live it down!
 Winds at stern muck feast sailing!
 Right is might and truth prevailing!
 God above is never failing,
 He will lead his others' rowing!

The fiscal year of the French vintage was 1890. The total production of wine was 3,000,000 hectolitres, nearly 3,000,000,000 gallons, more than 1890. The cider crop was 2, 2,000,000,000 less than in 1890.

A peculiar condition of affairs is to be seen in the River Valley of Minnesota and North Dakota. The wheat crop was so large that the farmers were not able to cut and thresh in time, and do their usual work. The wheat is now running all winter snowed under. The wheat is still in the stock and stacking, and unless help can be secured to do it, there will be a decreased acreage in 1892. HUNTER.

New Firm of Ranchers.

We have had the pleasure of a call from Messrs. Massey, Ranchers in the QuAppelle Valley. These gentlemen have leased the Mapleford Ranch for a number of years, and purchased the centre herd of Shorthorns, Polled Angus Galloways and Herefords which in addition to their own herd number some four hundred head including two thoroughbred pedigree bulls and some valuable horses and mares. They have secured what is popularly and generally known as the best located ranch in the QuAppelle Valley, consisting of over two thousand acres at the foot of Buffalo Lake and at the confluence of the QuAppelle and Moose Jaw Rivers. A church and school form the nucleus of a settlement called the "English Village," composed of English and Scotch settlers. On the ranch are found Deer, Antelope, and all varieties of game. Buffalo Lake which is 18 miles long by 2 wide is the favorite summer resort of pleasure seekers. The centre portion of the ranch consists entirely of hay land which grows luxuriantly every season, whilst the southern and eastern portions are beautifully and thickly timbered. The residence and outbuildings are delightfully situated in a shady grove of 50 acres consisting of elm, maple, ash and other trees with a clear, cool, never failing spring of the purest water gushing from the sides of "Battery Hill." There are a number of other springs on the southern and northern limits. Messrs. H. L. and F. B. Massey being both young, pushing, and energetic, are sure to carve out a name for themselves as stock breeders.

New Plate Glass Front.

The front of Mr. Chalmers' store, which was so badly damaged in the late fire, is now an ornament to the town and a credit to the enterprising firm.

Notice.

Farmers! I will have a complete stock of implements that will suit you, and only ask that you will inspect my stock before placing your orders. Samples will arrive in a few days.—
O. B. Fysh.
